

The best companies are built on the best people. Resumes and interviews rarely show who those people are.

Skillflare lets you watch candidates do the work. They sit down in a real desktop for the role — the same tools, files, and constraints the job actually uses — and complete a ready-made challenge designed by someone who has done that job. You get a recording of how they think and execute, and a score you can trust.

Not a quiz. Not a take-home that never gets reviewed. A live work sample, graded against an expert rubric.

Invite a candidate. They open a link. You see who can actually do the job.